Medic Recommends Measle For High School Girls

Noted medical research director, Dr. Virginia Apgar of Tenafly, N.J., today urged parents to arrange to have their high school daughters exposed to some friend with German Measles. She appeared at the Ambassador Hotel as the principal speaker before close to 1000 community leaders from over 100 L.A. County areas for the 1964 campaign "kickoff" luncheon of The National Foundation—March of Dimes.

"The relation of virus infections during pregnancy has made special progress this year. The virus causing German Measles—rubella—has been discovered, vaccine research is under way, and specific laboratory tests can be performed to determine whether or not the future mother has actually had rubella. Until vaccines are finally proved effective, and are available, it is still wise to arrange to have your high school daughter exposed to some friend with German Measles," Dr. Apgar told the audience. "As you know, if a mother in her first month of pregnancy gets the disease, the chances are high that her baby will be aborted or malformed," she added.

Referring to the use of drugs by pregnant women, the specialist stated, "The thalidomide epidemic is too recent for me to dwell on the need for caution in taking drugs without prescription. The problem partly comes down to, what is a drug? Are a couple of aspirin for a headache, an extra handful of vitamins, just to be sure, apesticide sprayed around the kitchen, drugs? The answer is yes. The use of these common substances is one good reason for you to consult your physician just as soon as you think you are pregnant and he will advise you as to what is really necessary, and what not to take, until the third month is over. And believe me, physicians are taking a long look at the prescriptions they write, for women in early pregnancy."

Dr. Apgar serves as the director of the Congenital Malformations Division for The National Foundation—March of Dimes. She is a specialist in the problems of newborn infants and is the creator of the famed "Apgar Score," a clinical evaluation made within 60 seconds after birth to determine normality. The score is determined by the heart rate of the infant, respiration, muscle tone and color. Its purpose is to learn whether any damage has occurred in the brain before or during birth. The information is useful in making a prognosis of the baby's chances for survival, and the test has become standard procedure in hospitals in many countries.

"TRIBUTE TO JOHN F. KENNEDY"

By REV. W. T. HOLCOMB
First Assembly of God Church
Torrance

Three are not a few days in each year that go by unnoticed — to these sacred days another day is to be added — November 22, 1963 — the date of the assassination of a great Representative American, John Fitzgerald Kennedy. From the day of his birth in 1917 to the day of his death I do not know of any other who lived so tremendously, and with such a great career as the 35th President of the United States.

We are a little too close to his day to do him justice. Some of us learned to admire him, and our praise of him loses force. Some were so bitterly opposed to him that they find it difficult, even yet, to restrain the criticism which now seems so out of place. Time will properly adjust his fame and I think that adjustment will assign him a high place in American History.

The four great outstanding personalities of American History are unquestionably, Washington, Lincoln, Roosevelt, and Kennedy. Possibly some may think it too early to put him in this category — but I am sure he would have been the last man to have compared himself with either of the others. In coupling his name with the other I am not thinking of them as Statesmen, or even as great men — but as great personalities. When you see Kennedy you see a remarkable personality. The test of personality is the human interests in daily incidents, the reactions and moods of the man, how did he smile, why did he frown, what were his tricks of gesture and speech. "Fellow Americans" was a familiar greeting.

Some men are aloof and austere, only their doctrines interest us. Human contact with them only detracts from their influence. Kennedy was neither aloof nor austere, his life, political and personal, was singularly open and so vitally human that men affectionately called him that, which was to them a term of endearment — "Jack."

AS SOME TALL CLIFF

Amidst towering mountains it is difficult to measure peaks — there is too much of "Kennedy" for us to discuss at length his unusual personality and his great character, much less his work as legislator, statesman, soldier, administrator, writer, traveler, lecturer, citizen, husband and father. Certain things are so outstanding in this remarkable life, however, that one can note them as he hurried by in his brief and tempestuous course.

Look at a few —

A son of a Massachusetts millionaire, fun loving child, Harvard graduate, athlete, nature lover, soldier, (who among us has not heard of PT 109), executive of mighty state and nation, friend and leader of the people, a devout Catholic, but first an American, Senator from Massachusetts and 35th President of the United States of America.

Ever a lover of his country, through good and evil report, born and bred in the East and respected and loved in the West, greeted everywhere by sympathetic crowds of the plain people of the world who recognized that whatever the errors of his judgement and whatever the impetuosity of his speech, here was a man who was a true Democrat in the midst of a Great Republic, with his hand outstretched to their aid and his voice outspoken for their rights.

An author, advocate and exemplar of "The Strenuous Life." In the Cuban Crisis, with his caustic remarks he made the Russian Socialistic Republic back down. A man of great force, he walked with a firm stride. He seldom hunted the partridge, but engaged in big game fishing — mounting his catch and gleefully hung it on his office wall to admire.

Two things stand out in the man Kennedy. His combativeness and sincerity. He was a fighter. No one could deny his courage. The story of his exploits in the Oriental Theatre of War in World War II. His courage in the destruction of his PT Boat and bull dog tenacity pressing his battle until finally rescued after sending out a coconut afloat on the crest of the waves with a request for 'help' in it. Towing an incapacitated man miles for hours until he reached land — He was a fighter!

His campaign for the Presidency in 1960 will go down in History as the most astonishing ever waged. He was a Politician surely, but he was no demagogue. He denounced a thing to its face. A man with whom no one could agree in all things and one with whom many disagreed in everything.

The cartoonists always made his picture one of unruly hair, and forceful jutting jaw — but there is the possibility that the generation to come will quote him as their Representative American.

NOW FADES THE GREAT AMERICAN

As a child in Massachusetts, then at Harvard, debating political science, discussing art and natural history. Then a long list of public and political achievements — until at last the Presidency of the United States — with its perplexing and difficult struggle with the Soviet Union abroad and at home no less perplexing — his fight for the Black Man and civil rights.

Now in the twilight of this great career, amidst the carnage of assassination we say good-bye to this American Statesman, who so gallantly served his country. The greatest nation on the face of the earth bows its head and half-masts its flags in deep sorrow and a fond farewell to the 35th President of These United States. American Representative American — who makes his grave in Arlington National Cemetery.

You and I may well remember him today — we shall not see his like soon.
